Murder of Steunenberg-Confession of Orchard-False Affidavit and Other Sensational Features

Bolse, Ida., May 4.—William D. Hay-wood, secretary and treasurer of the Western Federation of Miners, will on Western Federation of Miners, will on with the murder of ex-Governor Frank Steunenberg of this state. In all four men are in custody charged with the same offense; they are William D. Haywood, Charles H. Moyer, the president of the Western Federation of Minere, George A. Pettibone, a former member of the executive board of the same organization, and Harry Orchard, a member of the Miners' federation. Of these men Orchard, it is alleged, has made a confession it is alleged implicates the other men under arrest, together with others, as being accessories before the fact. Under the law of the state of Idaho, while it is adilted that Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone were not in the state of Idaho, while it is adilted that Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone were not in the state of Idaho, while it is adilted that Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone were not in spirit, that they beaned and therefore compassed the death of Governor Steunenberg.

Trouble in Coeur d' Alene.

In its main and lateral branches the complete history of the case extends back to the early veriod of conflict between the union and non-union miners in the Coeur d'Alene district or what is known as the Panhandle country of Idaho—that Thursday next be placed on trial charged with the murder of ex-Governor Frank complete history of the case extends back to the early veriod of conflict between the union and non-union miners in the Coeur d'Alene district or what is known as the Panhandle country of Idaho—that narrow strip of mountainous country, rich in lead and silver ore, under the shadow of the great divide between Idaho and Montana.

of the great divide between Idaho and Montana.

The background to the Steunenberg case is the momentous struggle in the Coeur d'Alene, extending as it did over a period of seven years and involving the calling out of the state militia and finally the dispatch of United States troops by President McKinley to the scene of conflict centering around the mining towns of Wallace, Gem and Wardner. To the part that the dead governor played in these stirring days, furnishing as he did an example followed later by the governors of Colorado, the prosecution goes for motive and theory charged against the accused.

It is alleged that Orchard's confession has been amply confirmed, that he will be convicted and executed. It is said that Orchard only desires to make a clean breast of his past and he is quoted as saying that he desires to clear the whole thing up "before I am executed." The state's prosecutors believe they can corroborate the confession in all its most important aspects. It is alleged that Pettibone was an expert on explosives and that he, Moyer and Haywood jointly plotted the crimes.

Confession of Orchard.

Orchard has made a confession, it is stated, and lies in the Idaho penitentlary ready to take the stand against Hay-wood. It is alleged that Orchard will repeat his confession upon the stand and as the chief witness for the state will relate a story filled with plot and counterplot startling in development and exeution. Steve Adams also made confession and

It is expected will be one of the witnesses for prosecution, though Adams later, under pressure of relatives, it is said, repudiated portions of his statement. Frank Steunenberg, who came from humble but masterful stock, began life as a printer, joined the Typographical union and throughout the greater part of his life was in strong sympathy with the cause and struggle of union labor. This cause and struggle of union labor. This circumstance gives ground for an important contention of the case. Upon the one hand it was argued that because Steunenberg refosed to countenance, or as government. ernor, permit violence in behalf of union labor he was stricken down as a traitor to his fellows by a mind that never for-gets and an arm that can reach through rears to strike when least expected. years to strike when least expected. Upon the other hand it is contended that his well-known advocacy of union principles made it at once improbable that his death was procured by union men.
The murder of Steunenberg is a pivotal point in the history of this, the most remarkable case in American jurisproadmen markable case in American jurisprudence, for the events develop backward and for-ward from his assassination.

Steunenberg was blown to death on the evening of December 30, 1905. In the gathgloom of a stormy evening he en-the side gate of his residence at laidwil, where retired from politics, he fived the simple life of a sheep farmer. A bomb of peculiar manufacture, with a string attached, was sunk in the snow beside the gate, the string—a piece of fishing line—being fastened to the gate. As Steunenberg entered, the opening of the gate sprang the trigger of the bomb. He was terribly mangled, being blown nearly fifteen feet from the gate. He lived nearly fifteen feet from the gate of the bomb. Orchard Suspected.

The explosion of the bomb aroused not only the little town of Caldwell, but the whole state of Idaho. Before the day was over it was suspected Orchard had murdered Steunenberg. He had gone to Caldwell from Denver as Thomas Hogan, and variously claimed to be an insurance man, a buyer of sheep and a semi-professional gambler. A search of his room in the hotel revealed the first definite evidence and on Jan. I. 1906, he was placed under arrest. Orchard's trunk revealed more evidence, and then a score of witnesses located him at various times, lurking about the Steunenberg home, with Jack Simpkins, a member of the executive board of the Western Fed-The explosion of the bomb aroused not

Purpose of Revenge.

Purpose of Revenge.

It is alleged that for purposes of revenge, as evidence of unrelenting determination to carry on a campaign of termination to carry on a campa honored the requisition of the governor of Idaho, but there was no judicial proceeding in Colorado, a circumstance that led to a long and bitter contest.

False Affidavid Made.

The affidavit charging that the men were in the state of Idaho at the time medieval in conception and nihilistic in execution. It is charged that Harry Orchard and Steve Adams, now under arrest and charged with the commission of other murders, were the hired agents and actual executors of many of these malevalent plats.

These crimes, it is alleged, can be traced down through the last fifteen years, through the days of the "bull pen," a stockade in which several hundred union miners were imprisoned in 1899 under guard of United States troops, again to guard of United States troops, again to the great Cripple Creek strike and the more recent prolonged struggle in Colorado. Geographically the action is confined chiefly to Colorado and Idaho, but Montana, Utah. Nevada and California were also stages on which were enacted portions of the tragedy.

There have been various preliminary legal proceedings in this case in Idaho and much delay due to one cause or another. The most important proceeding has been a change of venue taken recently from Canyon county to Adecember 1979. has been a change of venus taken re-cently from Canyon county to Ada coun-ay on application of the defense, on the Special counsel for the state of Idaho nd the officials and detectives connect-with the prosecution have maintained ed with the prosecution have maintained silence as to their case and very little is known publicly as to its features and details. Their progress will be contested at every point by an alert group of strong counsel for the defense. It is thought by many lawyers that the fate of the case here and in the higher courts hinges on the admission or rejection of exercise. on the admission or rejection of certain evidence. A specific murder is charged and the confinement of the evidence to that crime may exclude many features of the general conspiracy set up in theory.

Conspiracy Charged.

The defendants deny their guilt most ositively and in turn assert that they are the victims of a giant conspiracy as daring in conception and act as the one alleged against them. Their attorneys have withheld their plans, but it is generally believed that while they will admit that there were many crimes they will hold that their clients are will hold that their clients are guiltless, and will set up the theory that the plot and instigation came from their old enemies, the mine owners. They will probably seek to show that Orchard made his confession in the hope that he would save himself under omise of immunity and that the relausibility to an impossible tale.
